UM DEPARTMENT OF ANTHROPOLOGY ANNOUNCES
SUMMER SESSION SCHEDULE

MISSOULA--

The University of Montana Department of Anthropology summer offerings include: "Human Evolution in Prehistory," during the first four-week session, June 16-July 11, and "Anthropology of Art" the second four-week session, July 14-Aug. 8.

UM faculty affiliate Sally Slocum will teach "Human Evolution in Prehistory," a class which has been designed for teachers who are interested in increasing their background in human evolution and the rise of civilization. The course also considers the needs of students in graduate or undergraduate programs, students of anthropology, and the interested public.

Slocum will highlight the physical and biological evolution of the human species, the rise of civilization, and the early development and alteration of sex roles, the evolution of language and religion, and an analysis of human aggressive tendencies.

Slocum completed her Ph.D. at the University of Colorado in 1975.

Faculty affiliate Susanne L. Bessac will teach "Anthropology of Art," a class which is designed to interest artists, social scientists and school teachers who are seeking to understand the relationship between the visual arts and society from a cross-cultural point of view.

Bessac will highlight current anthropological, theoretical and methodological approaches to the study of artistic behavior. Students will culminate field experience by observing and discussion Laotian Hmong embroidery and costume design with older Hmong women living in the Missoula area. Students will also study modern Navajo film making and the development of the African mask.

Bessac received her M.A. in anthropology from the University of California at Berkeley in 1954.
